

HCL Technologies Strengthens Management's Intensity On 21st Century Enterprise Strategy

Noida, India, July 15th 2016 – HCL Technologies (HCL), a leading global IT services company, will further strengthen its 21st Century Enterprise strategy.

The 21st Century Enterprise strategy is a blueprint for re-aligning IT consumption formats to outcome-based, service-oriented, ecosystem-enabled, experience-centric and lean solutions. HCL consolidated its leadership in existing services lines, while attaining an industrialized, agile operating model, fueled by seamless business processes which have truly delivered customer value 'beyond the contract'.

Timely investments, niche Intellectual Properties, globally envied skilled talent and a highly engaged customer community have provided great competitive strength to the company, helping it achieve significant leadership in delivering Enterprise and Operations IT. HCL is evolving its service offerings into integrated propositions, which are witnessing increased demand and wins in momentum plays, across all segments and regions.

A role of Chief Operating Officer has been established to accelerate growth in the core business. C Vijay Kumar, currently President, Infrastructure Services will take on this additional responsibility and continue to report to Anant Gupta, President & CEO.

This will balance acceleration of new propositions and create the required ecosystems that build equivalent momentum in Business Technology through investments in offerings like BEYONDigital, IOT Works and Next-Gen ITO, which offer a unified experience through Multi-modal IT to its clients.

The company gains competitive advantage by increasing its management intensity to shape the strategy and culture required to service clients as they evolve into being a 21st Century Enterprise and furthers the industry leadership position it has attained.
