HCL Technologies Opens its Collaborative Engineering Hub in Redmond, WA to Significantly Expand its North American Operations

HCL to Create More Than 400 Jobs in the Greater Seattle Area

Sunnyvale, Calif. and Redmond, Wash.—September 21st, 2011—HCL Technologies, a leading global IT services company, announced the grand opening of a new state-of-the-art Global Delivery Center in Redmond, Washington. The initial investment of $4 million will create more than 400 jobs in the Seattle area over the next two years. The new center will support HCL's continued global expansion and increased focus on business innovation in software product development, test engineering and business critical platform development.

The Collaborative Engineering Hub will be a strong focal point for HCL's nearshore complex engineering programs. The opening was inaugurated by the Washington State Director of the Department of Commerce, Rogers Weed, in the presence of Shami Khorana, President of HCL Americas and special guests John Marchione, Mayor of the City of Redmond and Rich Kaplan, Corporate Vice President, Customer and Partner Advocacy at Microsoft. During the event, HCL announced Microsoft as its first official enterprise customer and Director Weed pledged $200,000 from the Workforce Investment Act Fund to HCL to assist with the training of future employees from the Seattle area.

"We appreciate that HCL has recognized the value of Washington, which is home to an established business climate, highly-trained technology professionals and an excellent quality of life," said Governor Chris Gregoire. "I am committed to HCL's success in Washington State and I applaud the diligent work of our state's Commerce Department and enterpriseSeattle in helping HCL choose Washington State to grow and expand," she added.

With a 350-seat capacity, the Collaborative Engineering Hub will be a strong focal point for HCL's near-shore complex engineering programs and will provide both engineering and product development services in the areas of internationalization and mobility.

"At HCL, we share the innovation and product strategy vision of our partners and the creation of a new center will help us further collaborate with them in building their global product development ecosystem," said Shami Khorana, President of HCL Americas. "This center shows our high level of commitment to our customers and our vision of local expansion by investment in people, facilities and processes," he added.

"We understand that the advancing technologies and their swift adoption have created disruptions in the market. The collaboration with HCL demonstrates our commitment to developing new technologies (such as large scale data management, cloud computing and mobility) that are redefining the technology landscape," said Rich Kaplan, Corporate Vice President, Customer and Partner Advocacy of Microsoft. "Our engagement will enable both HCL and Microsoft to provide scalable platform and solutions to our global customers in these emerging technologies," he further mentioned.

"We are thrilled to assist HCL as they establish new operations in the City of Redmond. Not only will HCL be adding hundreds of fantastic jobs, they will further our reputation as a world center for technology," said Jeff Marcell, President & CEO of enterpriseSeattle.

Committed to hiring and developing talent locally, HCL is working closely with the Washington State Department of Commerce and enterpriseSeattle, the provider of economic development services, to better engage the professionals and businesses from the Seattle area. Additionally, HCL will work closely with several local universities to recruit young graduates, including the University of Washington, University of Washington-Bothell Campus, University of Washington-Tacoma, Seattle University, and Seattle Pacific University.
