Medical Writing
- A Critical Success Factor for Life Sciences Organizations

HCL's Medical Writing Expertise in Diverse Therapeutic Areas

Medical writers at HCL are experienced physicians, pharmaceutical industry professionals, and expert writers who understand drug development processes and regulatory requirements such as ICH E6, E3, E2C, and E2F. They are also well versed with ICMJE guidelines, GPP, and CONSORT statements. The medical writers routinely apply this understanding when they develop medical writing documents and to facilitate this, they are allotted work based on their individual expertise in a therapeutic area.

HCL has expertise in diverse therapeutic areas such as, Vaccines, Orthopedics, Gastrointestinal, Oncology, Neurosciences, Cardiovascular, Metabolic Disorders, Osteoporosis, Respiratory Diseases, Pain Management, Dermatology, and Dental Sciences.

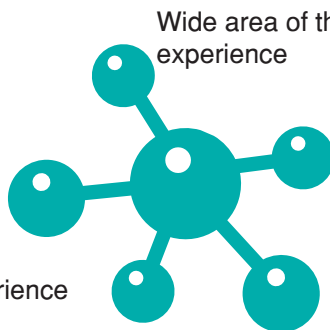

HCL has institutionalized and standardized the medical writing process and employs robust internal processes to minimize the number of document iterations.

HCL is responsible for protecting and securing the confidentiality of customer data, and ensuring compliance with HCL's security policies. HCL has adopted SO/IEC 27001:2005, for ensuring protection from a variety of threats and minimizing business damage.

From the onset of this engagement the HCL team executed with supreme communication and professionalism. The development of the report was punctual and it was very thorough and clear. When queries from our team were raised the HCL team was very clear in explaining their process and suggesting resolution to the queries as necessary. In many instances the HCL team became the “subject matter expert” in providing clarification about the literature and its pertinence to our project.”
